Vet report for A08388

ANIMAL DETAILS

Species: Canine
Breed: Crossbreed
Sex: Female, intact
Age: Adult
Tattoo/Microchip/Other: Nil
Name: Corie
Description: Cream

EXAMINATION FINDINGS

On clinical examination of the dog, it has been found that the animal is dehydrated and emaciated, and under fed, with an unhealthy dry and scabby hair coat. There is also evidence of ticks and fleas all over her body, including in the ears.

On blood smear it was evident that the animal has Canine Ehrlichia, (tick-bite fever) And will therefore be treated for this condition, as the diagnosis could be made from the blood smear, and presence of ticks on the body.

- Recommendation: The animal needs medical attention, to clear up the tick and flea infestation and to also treat the Ehrlichia that the animal currently suffers from. If no medical attention is given, or any treatment given, the animal will definitely die from this.

COMMENTS

Its evident the animal has been neglected due to the current health condition the dog is in, and that she definitely needs medical attention. She should have been taken to a Veterinary practitioner sooner and this was also neglected. Her general health and skin condition show that there was very limited to no care for this animal, wherever it was removed from.

Yours sincerely
