General Report Comments: Upon arrival, I called out, but there was no response. I observed an adult male sitting on a couch who appeared to be asleep and did not respond when called. A neighbour then approached and went inside the house to wake him. Upon waking, he appeared to be intoxicated.

I observed the dog in question and noted that it was suffering from a severe penile prolapse . The dog was lying on top of a pile of garbage and appeared to be in a poor condition. The neighbour advised that she would attempt to locate a person named Monique. While she was away, an adult female exited the house and appeared to have only recently woken up.

The female identified herself and explained that the dog belonged to her son, Claston Skippers, who is currently bedridden with tuberculosis and resides in another street. She stated that the family had entrusted the dog to Monique Waterboer, who lives alone. According to her, Monique had failed to provide the dog with adequate care, and when she arrived at the property in the morning, she found the dog to be in a severely injured state. She had subsequently asked the neighbour to contact the SPCA for assistance.

I explained that, based on the dog's condition, the prognosis was extremely poor and that the animal was suffering unnecessarily. I therefore recommended humane euthanasia to prevent any further suffering. She agreed to surrender the dog for this purpose. She identified herself as Rowina Skippers and signed the surrender form.

I issued a warning to Monique Waterboer stating that keeping a sick or injured animal without the provision of necessary veterinary treatment constitutes an offence under the Animals Protection Act . The warning further advised that should she be found committing a similar offence in the future , further legal action may be considered.

As Monique Waterboer was not present, Rowina Skippers accepted and signed acknowledgement of the warning on her behalf.
