Please also take note of the following:

- 1.Once surrendered, the owner has no further rights to the animals and the SPCA is then given full rights to decide on their future.
- 2.The SPCA does not provide any updates on these surrendered animals to their previous owners after they have been surrendered.
- 3.The SPCA unfortunately cannot guarantee that an animal will be put up for adoption after surrender and can make no promises in that regard.

The above are unfortunately in place due to the fact that we take in up to 24000 stray and surrendered animals per year, which is a near impossible task. There are simply not enough good homes out there for all these animals.

Do you understand?

Kind regards,

Lauren

Thank you.

So you understand that we can come to fetch the dog but you are going to sign over your right as owner over the puppy, the puppy will belong to SPCA and you will not get it back ever.

Do you understand?

I understand that
